Barbados: The government apparently plans to bar the Second Regional Black Power Conference scheduled for July.

25X1

Barrow, evidently spurred by the recent disorders in Trinidad, has taken a strong stand against the violence that has been associated with black power activities. He has proposed legislation that would make it a criminal offense to preach violence or racial hatred. The legislation would also prevent nonnationals from participating in the country's political activity.

An increasing number of Caribbean leaders are willing to risk political attack from radicals in the interest of appealing to broader public sentiment and preserving public safety. Their reluctance to yield to the demands of the radicals and their fear of disruptions could increase the difficulty of finding an alternate site for the Black Power Conference.
